Years into the Cold War, the space race was at its top! Many theories and different speculations were taking place; this book is a beautiful compilation of those. It offers poems of a great variety that are all imaginative and somewhat political. Although there were some grammatical mistakes (mostly excess commas and wrong capitalizations), I enjoyed the book immensely! The illustrations were mind blowing.

Honorable mentions:

- *Technicians♥ (Jean Kenward): The magnificence of creation!
- *Make Believe? (Gareth Owen): very imaginative. I love the comparisons!
- *Shed in Space (Gareth Owen)
- *Count Down??👉??? (Julie Holder)
- *A THE LUNCH / APOLLO (Stanley Cook): creative*
- *MAN (?) (Stanley...): lovely?
- *The Eagle Has Landed? (Adrian Rumble): I love how this takes you through the motions and puts you up to speed!
- *Space Trip? (James Kirkup) The Youth Soul :)! Very imaginative and lively.
- *Aldrin Collins and Armstrong?
(Michael Rosen) Political and light! Loved it: the cycle of launching again and again and the notes beside it.
- *Man and Height?? (John Rice): This tackles the idea that people have different circles and standards of achievement. With great achievements, comes great loss as well. I love the ending and detailed description!
- *Song in Space?? (Adrian Mitchell): 85% into the book, this was definitely still my favorite!
- *The Ballad of Morgan the Moon (Max Boyce): love the rhyme! It's so smooth!
- *Here is the News from space (Michael Rosen): just lol.
- *Space Spot (Max Fatchen): love this version of Twinkle Twinkle. Surely it has a continuation?
- *Rockets and Quasars? (John Rice)
- *The First Men on Mercury (Edwin Morgan): does this poem imply that the humans took over mercury slowly?????? The ????? of the human race!
- *Our Solar System (Eric Finny): "Well the solar system broke up pretty fast in my bus money you had gone for myself and I had to borrow." lol

*The Tenth Planet? (Alan Bold): quite bold indeed!

Rhymed so well and placed a new entity on the Earth, again mentioning the human's capacity to destroy for greed.

**My Thing from Outer Space (James Kirkup)

*^A Close Encounter? (Adrian Rumble): what happens if one was not afraid to discuss ideas with strangers?

*Space Joke? (Julie Holder) Imao deep.

*The Marrog (R.C.Scriven)

*On Some Other Planet? (John Rice): a nice poem for the lonely

*Space Men (Charles Connell): like the monkeys jumping on the bed?

*Spacepoem 3: Off Course (Edwin Morgan): everything shifts in space!

*Black Hole? (Adrian Rumble): Amen.

*The Doomed Spaceman??? (Ted Walker): very melancholic.

*The Ark (Stanley Cook)

*Space thought (Derek Stuart) - No need to scan the skies (John Kitching): the mysteries of Earth outweigh everything! It is all with and within us.

*Retired????? (Iain Crichton Smith): humans can do a great many things :). One step at a time...

*The Spacefarer?? (Julie Holder): heartbreaking!

*The Earthling!!!! (Brian Patten): the nature of the human being, the mistakes and guilt, the shine of his soul!

*Alpha-B375-Earth Visitors' Guide... Section.....!!!! (John Cunliffe): Earth-dwellers are not to be trusted. They have coding and decoding errors produced by their systems which they call misunderstandings. Now you will understand why Earth-men are forever fighting!

*The Choice (Robert Morgan)

*Do you think well ever to see Earth, sir? (Sheenagh Pugh): never take anything for granted old man. This grass you step on smelled so good in the morning. You know know what comes next.

*In the late evening (Iain Crichton Smith): good point?

Earth is not named after a god.

*The Beautiful Strangers (James Kirkup): He just proved Santa Clause's an alien.
